Crear espacios de convivencia universitaria: un reto para el desarrollo del talento

University years are key to personal and professional development. Teaching needs to be focused on creating work, intellectual and personal habits, and on enabling students to integrate the academic knowledge specific to each degree with a critical, open and global view. This education cannot be reduced to technical or general plans, but should have an impact -vital impact- in each student, mainly obtained through dialogue. This requires creating spaces for significant coexistence between students and between teachers and students. At these spaces, a humanistic dialogue on the profound issues that concern people today is created and there is also a place for reflection and the development of personal and professional skills.
